ANNOUNCEMENTS BREED THEATRE.

of Petersburg, Spectacular Civil War Drama in Two Reels.

For today and tomorrow the Breed will show one of the finest Civil war drames that has ever been shown in this city. It is entitled The Siege of Petersburg and is based on historical incidents in connection with one of the most sensational campaigns of the Rebellion. History tells that the various assaults of the Federals against the city of Petersburg, Virginia, continued for ten months, and that during a period of ten weeks 70,000 Federals and over 40,000 Confederates were either killed or taken prisoners. One of the many thrilling moments shows the collapse of the burning bridge crowded with fighting soldiers. Another scene shows the great explosion of the giant mine, The Crater, beneath the Confederate batteries. In a word, it is the romance and reckless bravery of the great war exploited with astounding realism.

The real thread of the plot carries with it a wonderful story of love, duty, humility, sacrifice, devotion and heroism. It tells of a young Confederate officer who is in love with a southern belle, who is also loved by a poor young man, whom her family has betriended. She does not return

Davis Theatre.

With 5000 feet of feature film coming to this house headlined by The Dead Pays in two reels a Kay-Bee feature and four other subjects on the bill, it does look like a new standard for exnellency was to be established, but as a matter of truth this bill only marks the beginning for in the feature there will be presented in this house great artists of the day in moving pictures. Among others Mr. Daniel Frohman presents James K. Hackett and his special company in The Prisoner of Lenda, a dramatic masterpiece of romance and adventure by Anthony Hope. The Three Wiltons are to be with us and offer for your entertainment a bounding trampoline act. If you know what a trampoline act is this may not be new to you, but if you have to refer to your dictionary for the answer then indeed there is "something new under the sum." Silver and North have a most laughable sketch called The Beathfullest Man, in which they are given a chance for some excellent singing and good dancing.

Aids for the K. of C. Ball. were put on the decorations at the armory for the Knights of Columbus ball, so that the big drill shed stands ready to unfold its dream of beauty over the heads of the dancers tonight.

The following have been chosen as aids at the ball:
Patrick Hinchey, John S. Nagle.
Thomas Enright, John P. Corcoran,
Charles V. James, Jeremian T. Riordan, James Murphy and James H.

IN YE OLDEN TIMES

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

There is much being said and written about the worn out lands of New England, but according to the views of my father. Ebenezer Jewett of Hampiton, who is in his 85th, year, lands are no less fertile than they were in his boyhood; for use his own words: "It we got a crop of corn in those days we had to fertilize heavily."

On our home farm the Indians cleared and tilled the greater part of our fields more than two hundred years ago; but Tradition tells us that they caught fish in the Little river that flows at the foot of the land and fertilized each hill of corn with them, which goes to show, that even in early times, New England soil lacked the fertility of western lands. Yet with proper fertilization we can produce the best of crops which makes it necessary own side of the dish, you black dog, you."

As the Minister rode away, the farmer to the Minister rode away, the farmer to the fertilized are the his load of washback on the clergyman's side of the highway, for he undenstood the application of the story. This old story serves to show us in what value the road-wash was haid by the old time people, as fertilize for their fields.

Even the old darkey, so runs the story of ye olden times, realized the necessity of proper fertilization; for after he had learned by experience the sad results of neglect, he fertilized his field properly, and after carefullist of his labor and prayed: "Oh, Lord, send us big ears this year and lots of 'em; not sech little ears as you did last year for it would take a dozen of em to fill a hog's mout."

fertility of western lands. Yet with proper fertilization we can produce the best of crops which makes it necessary for the farmer to use every means in his power to increase his fertilization of his fields.

According to the old adage: "Old men for counsel!" I will try to tell you "How they Used to Do, When I was a boy" as father always prefaces his stories. In those good old days they lived much within themselves. Good old days they surely were and prosperous they must have been for our fine old homesteads and churches were built then. Grain and meat were profine old homesteads and churches were built then. Grain and meat were produced on the farms to supply the New England markets. There was a saying common among the people that there was money in hogs if they could get enough out of the pork to pay for the corn consumed, which, in those days was always worth a dollar a bushel. The main object of the farmer in keeping hogs seems to have been to keep up the fertility of the soil; and one of his chief duties was to keep his porkers employed in working over his porkers employed in working over compost of all kinds that he constantly supplied to the pens.

Taking the wash from the roads was a favorite mode of increasing the piggies' stock of business. There is an old story handed down the misty track

SHIPPING TRUST

STILL IN FORCE Testimony Received by Cable at Yesterday's Hearing.

Washington, Jan. 9.-That the agreement entered into in 1908 by the Lamport and Holt, the Prince and the Undertaker and Embalmer Hamburg-South American steamship companies, constituting the so-called "shipping trust" between the United States and South America, is still in force, except as it applies to a pooling force, except as it applies to a pooling of interests and rebate system on southbound commerce, was the testimony placed today before the house merchant marine cammittee investigating the alleged trust.

The statement was in the form of a cable from the foreign agent of the Prince line, who cables the company's a cable from the foreign agent of the Prince line, who cables the company's representative here on the question. It did not agree with the opinion of Lorenzo Daniels, agent in this country for the Lemport and Holt company, who said he thought it had terminated.

Mr. Daniels acknowledged that contracts were made by his company and that some contracts were made conjointly with the other steamship lines flxing the freight rates charged. The United States Steel corporation, the Baldwin Locomotive company and the Earber Asphalt company were mentioned as having, or having had contracts. The Singer company, he said, agreed to ship all its goods by one of the three steamship companies' beats. He denied, however, that this was the same as saying that they would not ship by any other line. As to the steel corporation, he said the contracts were specific, not continuing. The rates to be charged, he declared, were fixed abroad, not in New York, by the committee there of the companies. The freight rates varied, he said, from week to week, according to the market; but he added that there was no discrimination in favor of any shippers and that the big shippers were protected so as to give them as low rates as anyone eise. vere protected so as to give them as ow rates as anyone else. poor young man, whom her family has befriended. She does not return his love because of his lowly station, his love because of his lowly station, preferring the young officer. During the great slege the poor fellow risks his life repeatedly to save the life of his rival, and the officer is not slow to appreciate it. To return the many favors the officer forges an order to recall the poor fellow who has been stationed at the great mine which is to be fired the following morning. The officer takes the vacant place made by the forged order and is killed at the great explosion. The poor fellow returns with the sad news and tells of the heroism of his superior, to the family of his benefactors.

more eager to fight than were the men of Windham, and from the North part of the town, what is now Hampton, went Ebenezer Jewett, a young man of twenty-six; for like all patriots he had a righteous hatred against tyranny and he wanted to do his part in drivin the British from America.

He was born in 1748 and lived till 1826. Of those stirring days he had many stories to relate and his favorite one was of the days that he and his companions were en the Neck waiting for a chance to fight the British.

For days his company had been with scarcely any food; they were on the verge of starvation, not daring to venture within sight of the red coats, and cut off from their friends. Finally a black snake was killed, skinned and roasted, but he objected to eating it, for as he said "He was devil enough himself, without cating one," but the rest of the Windham men were too starving hungry to scruple at snakement in their time of need. Later some partridges were killed and the famishing patriots stripped the feathers from the birds and ate the raw fiesh with great relish. Relief came to them soon, but the partridges undoubtedly saved them from starvation.
